MODELLING LEGISLATION AS A GRAPH IN THE OTF PROSE OBJECT MODEL AND BLOCKCHAINS

The intersection of Contract, Legislation and Ontologies

ENDORSE.

THE EUROPEAN DATA CONFERENCE ON REFERENCE DATA AND SEMANTICS

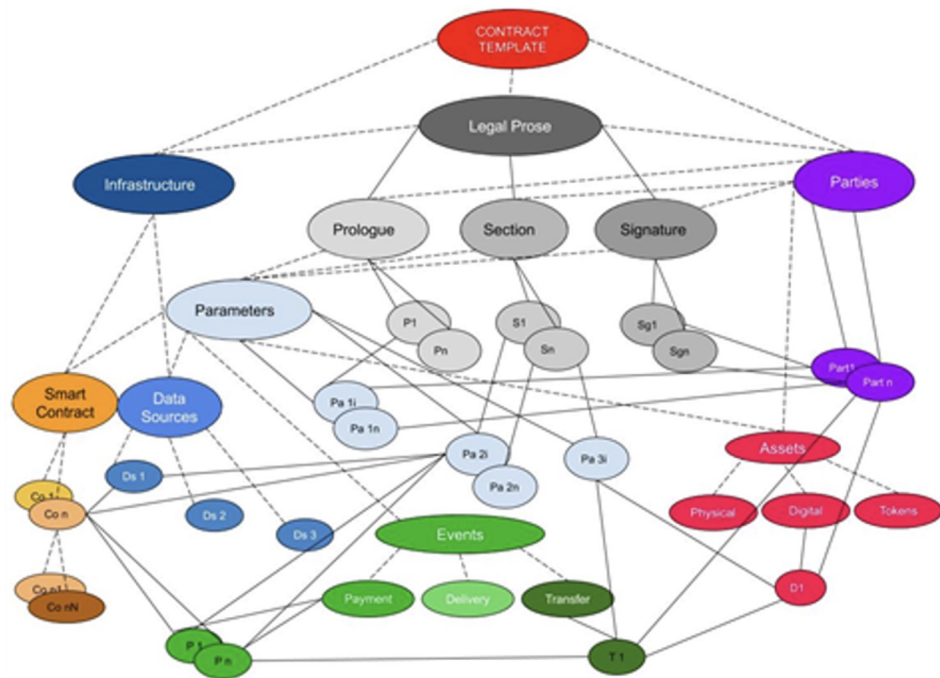

CONTRACTS:

Tomorrow, you'll hear from Sally Guyer and Luigi Telesca about the Open Trust Fabric and the EU's “Modelling the EU Economy as an Ecosystem of Contracts”

I will introduce Prose Objects
IAMAL – (merely a lawyer)

We start from the observation that “contracts” can be expressed as nodes of deal specifics that reference nodes for the parties, form of document and other relevant entities

If we write this way, then the contract information remains structured as a graph

RELATIONSHIPS:

Relationships can be expressed as objects

Patient Consent

Global Alliance for Genomics and Health
(GA4GH) model form

PROSE OBJECTS:

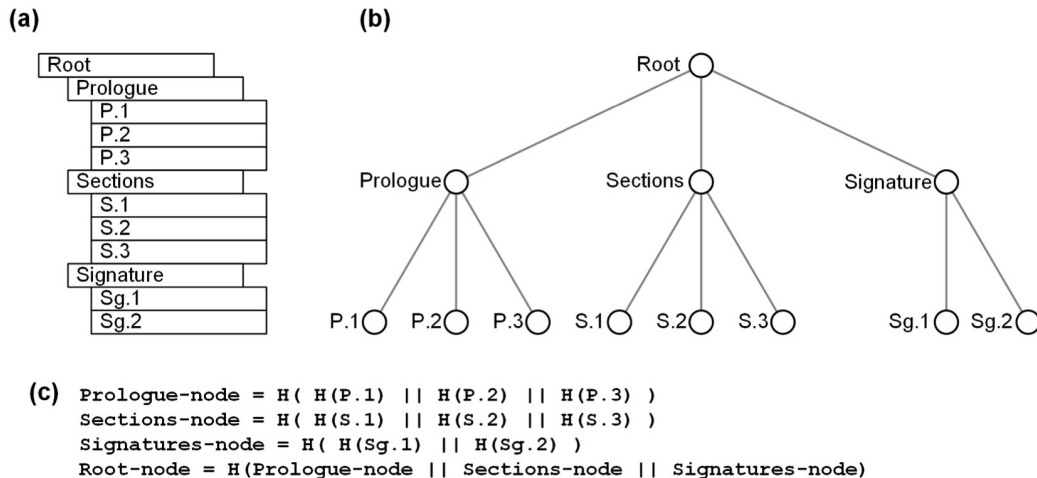

The “Prose Object” data format is a very simple semantic web model for documents

Prose Objects are unitary and composable with other functions and objects

They are composable and malleable via inclusion and overriding

They are compatible with smart contracts, blockchains, and ontologies

Contract Hash Tree

- Contract expressed as a tree of parts
- Compute hash-points from leaf upwards
- Start contract negotiation using root-document and root-hash
- Contract modification causes new hash-points to be computed

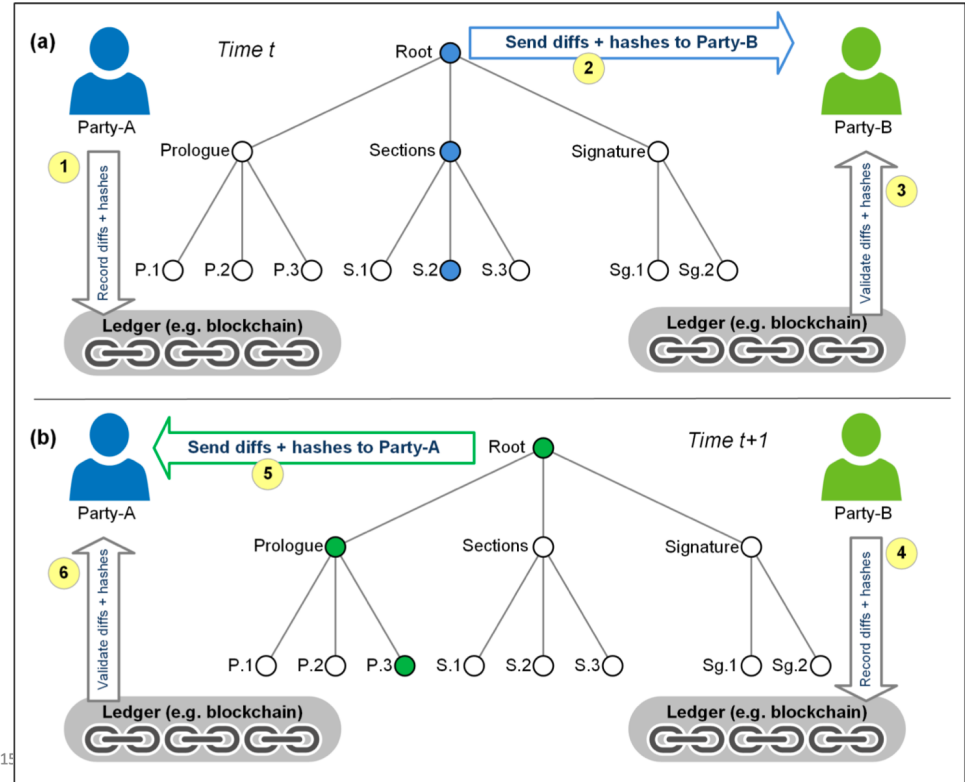

TRANSACTION FLOWS:

Prose Objects linked together can model contract negotiation and performance flows

Each event is treated as a node

A history of a transaction expressed as a graph permits reasoning about impacts and meanings

Prose Objects:

Prose Objects are:

Simple in theory

Agnostic in format - in files and emails, git, blockchains, databases, wikis, JSON, XML ...

Composable – and able reference other resources

Malleable - the end user can override or extend every element

A Named Collection of Nodes:

ThisNode:

KeyName=Value as a string with {VariableName} and {1.sec}

1.sec=HTML Formatting

PrefixName=[OtherNode1]

= [OtherNode2]

Objectified Agreements:

A contract document ordinarily:

- Links to the parties
- Links to some environmental factors
- Links to a form, parameterized for a use-case
- Has parameters
- Makes some choices among alternatives

//	This presents a completed NDA. It lists the parties, a place for choice of law and dispute resolution, a form and then the business points. The parties and the place are "objects" that stand for the parties and places, which makes the agreement partially "computable", as well as easy to write. The form is a One-Way, built on a common library for all NDAs. Follow the form link to see the One-Way, the general library and its components. The components include libraries for each section. It links to a general frame for "all" agreements, universally.

PRIMARY LAW as PROSE OBJECTS - the GDPR:

Legislation and other collective terms
can also be expressed as Prose Objects

A contract may include legislative language for convenience or because the law requires it

When reading a contract provision, it is often useful to follow links to the legislation that motivates the provision

This also helps machine learning

STANDARDS and DISPUTES – ICC ARBITRATION:

Similarly, a contract may give rise to a dispute that needs to be resolved by litigation

If the contract is expressed as Prose Objects, drawing from open models, the adjudicator may be able to cut to the substance of the dispute more quickly.

The rules themselves can also be expressed as Prose Objects

PROSE OBJECTS and ONTOLOGIES:

Contracts are a great vehicle for incremental codification, standardisation and convergence on ontologies

Some powerful ontologies are ready for use

This is an example of an ontology - ACTUS - expressed as Prose Objects

NEXT STEPS:

Prose Objects are in their infancy.

- a well-developed theory,
- a multitude of examples,
- support from the OpenTrustFabric.org, the WorldCC and the EU Commission's "Modelling the EU Economy as an Ecosystem of Contracts."

aNewGovernance.org is also adopting Prose Objects.

Our ontology is provisional and primitive. The model needs further development along the lines of semantic web.
